

Al Ain Men's College Launches Green Day

23 April 2009

AL AIN - The Al Ain Men's Campus of the Higher Colleges of Technology launched the First Green Day on Tuesday as part of Earth Day and its commitment to the Eastern Region's community.

According to Brent Mills, Director Al Ain Colleges, "The world today faces immense environmental challenges. We believe that this competition raised environmental awareness among our students and inspire them to become leaders in national and global efforts to confront these challenges."

Mills said that the aim of the event, which included displays and presentations, was to promote a greener lifestyle with a strong focus on environmental concerns and solutions that impact the lives of all residents, not just in Al Ain, but globally.

He added that the students must learn how they can play a vital role in the environment's future and be a part of the solution.
