May 11 - 2009

Noble Denton, the marine and shipping consultancy, has expanded its presence in the Middle East with the opening of its first offices in Saudi Arabia and Bahrain, aimed at ensuring it can work closely with its ever increasing client base there

The new offices in Al Khobar, KSA, and Manama, Bahrain, will be managed by Peter Jorgensen, who previously held the same role in the company's office in Cairo, Egypt.

The new offices will provide on the ground support for many of Noble Denton's key services, including marine warranty services, ship inspections and suitability surveys, detailed design engineering, rig-moving and general marine and engineering consultancy.

David Wells, Managing Director for the Middle East, said:

'Noble Denton continues to buck the trend in 2009 and this is a prime example of the way in which the company is expanding, significantly so in the Mena region.'

'It is an exciting time for the company and we look forward to working on the ground in these countries and having our expertise directly available to our clients there,' Wells added.
